WEATHER FORECAST
KENTUCKY—Partly cloudy and somewhat warmer today, tonight and Sunday.

United Press YOUR PROGRESSIVE HOME NEWS-PAPER FOR OVER HALF A CENTURY Murray, Kentucky, Saturday Afternoon, August 2, 1947 MURRAY POPULATION — 5187 Vol. XIX; No. 41

SOLVED HOUSING PROBLEM—Threatened with eviction, 79-year-old John L. Stryker, a factory worker of Stratford, Conn., didn't resort to the law for protection. Instead he rolled up his sleeves and, with the help of Richard Eddinger, a 23-year-old ex-GI, built himself this six-room house in just six weeks. Looking at the structure, complete except for a few details, are Stryker, his wife Louise, 68, and Eddinger.

Ford And Union See Little Chance Of Avoiding Strike

Detroit, Aug. 2 (UP)—Ford Motor Company and Union negotiators scheduled another meeting today in a last-ditch attempt to avert a strike of 108,000 production workers, tentatively set for Tuesday, but both sides appeared pessimistic.

A spokesman for the United Auto Workers (UAW) said, "Things really look bad now."

The UAW international executive board called a special meeting for 1 p.m. today to authorize the walk-out. A union spokesman said authorization was a "certainty."

The company also prepared for the strike. It said it would keep 2,500 men at work today at its River Rouge assembly lines and Highland Park plant truck and tractor lines in an attempt to produce as many automobiles, trucks and tractors as possible. Ford normally operates on a five-day basis.

Both Richard T. Leonard, UAW vice president and Ford department director, and John S. Bugas, Ford industrial relations director, looked glum when yesterday's meeting broke up.

"Nothing doing. No progress whatsoever," Leonard said.

A union spokesman said workers would report Tuesday at some 40 Ford plants throughout the nation, but would walk off the job after a few hours unless the double-barreled dispute over a pension plan and a "John L. Lewis" contract sidestepping penalty provisions of the Taft-Hartley law was settled.

UAW President Walter Reuther denied last night in Washington, D. C., that the union was attempting to make Ford the "guinea pig" in an attempt to evade the Taft-Hartley law as charged by Henry Ford II, company president.

"We are not attempting to nullify the act," Reuther said in a radio broadcast (Mutual's "Meet the Press").

Ford has offered the Union a promise not to file damage suits under the act because of "illegitimate" strikes if the UAW would guarantee to halt or prevent such wildcat walkouts with "reasonable diligence." He proposed that an impartial umpire decide the responsibility for such walkouts.

Thomas Thompson, president of Ford Local 600 said the union rejected the impartial-umpire proposal because "it would give one man 'the power to crush and wipe out our union.'"

Ford and Bugas went to New York Thursday to ask CIO President Philip Murray to intervene to halt the walkout. Ford said he could not agree to give the UAW a contract which would sidestep federal law.

The UAW replied bitterly that Ford "misrepresented" the union cause for strike action to Murray, and accused the company of a double-crossing attempt to back out on a pension plan it promised in earlier negotiations.

Some 51,800 workers already were idle in the auto industry because of strikes.

The latest dispute was at Kaiser-Frazer Corp. where 6,000 workers were sent home yesterday because of a wildcat walkout of 28 men in the trim line department at its Willow Run plant. Local officials said the strike was unauthorized and a union meeting would be held tomorrow to settle the dispute.

The Hudson Motor Car Company also was forced to halt production and send home 9,000 UAW members yesterday because of a wildcat strike by 39 Sanders and soldiers. Some 33,800 were idle throughout the industry because of a strike at Murray Corp. of America, a key supplier.

Third Major Weather Change Reported Due As Mercury Starts Up

By—United Press

A new heat wave struck the western plains today and a large portion of the country got ready for its third major weather change in less than a week.

Temperatures which had climbed to new 1947 highs Wednesday, then skidded to record lows early yesterday, were climbing back above normal today. But the weather bureau said the new heat wave would be less intense and less widespread than the earlier one.

Mountain states sweltered under 100-degree temperatures after a brief respite. The Midwest reported between 90 and 100 degrees during the week-end. Easterners hoped the new heat wave would break up over Illinois as predicted by weather experts.

The Pacific coast and the southwest areas reported the only normal temperatures.

Montana, North and South Dakota and other north central states reported temperatures of 100 degrees.

The thermometers in Phillipsburg, Kans., registered 100 degrees. Topeka had a high of 104 and Kansas City 103. It was a scorching 106 at Miami, Okla.

From Kansas to the Gulf of Mexico and from the Atlantic ocean through Arizona a heat wave began early in the week continued with temperatures hovering around the 100-degree mark.

A tropical storm which moved inland from the Gulf coast at Brownsville, Texas, with 35 to 40 mile-per-hour winds, was blowing itself out, the weather bureau said.

Playoff Series Is Tied Up As Murray Mfg., Breds Win

The Murray Mfg. Co. pulled an upset last night as they pushed over a run in the last half of the seventh to defeat the College Vets by a score of 5-4. In the nightcap of the playoff games at Murray High Field the Murray Breds managed to outscore the Murray Independents and win their contest 15-10. The teams are now tied in the playoff series at one all and the same teams will be scheduled Monday night to determine the first round winners.

George Sanders of the Stovemakers pitched seven hit ball and struck out six as the lower Murray boys squashed past the league champs Outland Sanders and Coleman lead the hitting attack with two apiece. The Stovemakers scored in the first as Outland doubled and Sanders drove him in with a double.

In the third, Outland singled and Sanders again doubled bringing him in to tie the score at two all. In the fourth Inman was safe on an error. Smith singled, and Coleman drove in both runs with a long single to center. The winning run came in the last of the seventh when Inman and Norville Cole singled and Coleman again singled to center.

Manager Charlie Gibbs used Todd Yates on the mound for his Vets. Yates pitched nine hit ball but his team mates made five errors behind him.

The Vets scored two runs in the first as Underwood bunted and Carlisle singled to center. Both runs scored on a pair of errors by Outland. In the first of the seventh, the Vets pushed across two more runs to tie the score at four all. Solomon singled, Yates was safe on error, Underwood was safe on an error sending Solomon across and Yates scored on a passed ball.

The final game of the night found Brucechieri's Breds pounding three independent pitchers for 14 hits and six errors were made. The Breds scored 2 in the second, 4 in the third, 6 in the fourth, and 3 in the seventh. Bill McClure pounded plate and Brucechieri found his hitting pace in getting 3 for 4. "Whip" McGrath batted in three runs to lead the attack. McGrath hit a round triper in the seventh with two on base.

The Independents used "Goon" Hodges, Harmon West and Gene Patterson on the mound. Dick Farrell pitched the whole game for the Breds allowing 15 hits while two errors were made behind him.

Lubie Veale's boys scored 4 in the third, 4 in the fifth, and two in the sixth. Billy Furgerson and Bill Miller each had three hits in four trips to the plate.

Senate Looks Into Meyer's Parties For E. Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (UP)—Elliott Roosevelt recommended purchase of Howard Hughes' photo planes over Air Force objections on the same day that the west coast plane maker's publicity man provided lavish entertainment out of his "Roosevelt expense account" at swank New York night clubs. Senate investigators were told today.

Expense vouchers of Hughes' publicity man, as added up by a Senate investigation subcommittee showed that $5,083.79 was spent in the entertainment of young Roosevelt and his wife, Faye Emerson, from 1943 through 1945. There also were other guests at some of the parties listed on these expense vouchers.

John Meyer, Hughes' rotund publicity man, testified on the expense vouchers which showed the lavish entertainment and services he arranged.

The committee is inquiring into the details of the award of a $50,000,000 contract for construction of 100 of the new plywood planes to Elliott Roosevelt, then a colonel in the Army Air Forces. The committee wants to know whether the sumptuous entertainment provided for Elliott, wife and friends had anything to do with the recommendation.

The Hughes contract for photo planes later was reduced to three planes which will cost the government $21,600,000.

Sen. Claude Pepper, D. Fla., read the committee a long memorandum dated August 20, 1945, from Elliott Roosevelt which strongly recommended purchase of the Hughes' planes.

On that night, Meyer testified, Elliott was roundly entertained at New York's swank Club 21, Stork Club and the El Morocco Club.

For dinner at the 21 Club Meyer listed $42.00. Then he spent $17.50 for a stop at the Stork Club, and $47.00 at El Morocco.

On that date Meyer also reported he laid in a $115.00 stock of liquor for his Ritz-Tower, New York apartment.

It was that trip to New York and the round of parties which particularly interested Chairman Homer Ferguson, R. Mich.

The round of parties didn't stop on the night of August 20, but resumed the next night. The account compiled by the committee from Meyer's vouchers for August 21 showed an outlay of $172 for a party and dinner at the El Morocco Club, $84 for party and dinner at the Copacabana Club and "presents for four girls, $200."

On the night of August 22, Meyer put out $165 for a dinner party at the Monte Carlo Club and $78 for dinner at Leon and Eddie's. Another item was $75 for "presents for two girls."

More dinner parties followed on August 23, 26 and 27th in New York and Washington. On the night of the 27th Meyer's vouchers listed $76 for dinner at the Statler Hotel in Washington and $50 for "girls at hotel" (date).

Included in Meyer's spending spree was an item of $132 for nylon hose as a present to Faye Emerson on August 25.

Ferguson asked whether the New York part of the entertainment was not "quite a weekend."

Meyer replied emphatically: "Yes, indeed, that was quite a weekend."

Meyer wiped his face with a white silk handkerchief as he sought to explain how he flew to New York to provide that round of parties.

Ferguson showed a photograph of an Army Air Force priority on which he traveled. Meyer said he didn't know that he was traveling on a priority and assumed Hughes had got it for him. He said his sole original purpose in going to New York was to promote Hughes' picture "The Outlaw," and he had not intended to meet Elliott Roosevelt.

Calloway Voter Trek To Polls; Rain, Cloudy Skies Threaten Over State

Nine Calloway County Precincts Report Vote Is Fairly Heavy; Officials See Big Turnout

Calloway county voters started their trek to the polls early today as lines started forming at the five Murray precincts before Murray business places opened their doors at 8 o'clock.

Election officials at all five city precincts felt that the vote would be heavy but said it "was too early to tell how heavy" at press time. A check before noon revealed that approximately 1,500 voters had voted before 11 o'clock in Murray's five precincts.

Election workers in Murray gave the following figures at 11 o'clock: West Murray: 339 votes, precinct has 1,222 registered voters.

North West Murray: 262 votes, precinct has 914 registered voters.

South East Murray: 133 votes, precinct has 623 registered voters.

North East Murray: 132 votes, precinct has 700 registered voters.

South West Murray: 600 votes, precinct has 1,799 registered voters.

In the two Hazel precincts voters were coming to the polls early and

Fire Breaks Out In Belk-Settle Basement

Murray firemen extinguished a small but smoky fire this morning in the basement of the Belk-Settle Department Store.

Firemen, answering a call at 8 a.m., found a burning coal pile aflame in the store basement. They said the fire was caused by an electric wire which was buried beneath the coal.

Callowayan's Chicken Is Hit By Lightning

J. M. Thomas, publisher of the Model Star and resident of the Hazel community, said today that he lost a chicken Monday.

"I heard lightning strike directly behind my house," Thomas said, "and then I heard a chicken squawk."

Thomas declared the air was "filled with the odor of burning sulphur."

The chicken was dead.

Crowd Cheers Caught Cab

New York, Aug. 2 (UP)—Fifty-five-year-old Henry Duff's Hanson cab, a relic of the gay 90's, got stuck in the middle of the street at Times Square early today.

Traffic stopped and a crowd gathered to shout encouragement to Duff and his horse while a police emergency squad jacked up the carriage and prised a wheel from the crack along an abandoned street car track.

Disciples Of Christ Convention Is Told Bible Is Moral Factor

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 2 (UP)—Despite many contradictory historical facts the Bible is the "moral foundation" to history, William Robinson of Birmingham, England, told the international convention of Disciples of Christ today.

History has shown power to bring men and women to action, whether for good or evil, Robinson said.

This is true of Fascism and Marxism, he said, adding that in both cases, the interpretation of the history of the nation concerned drove a dejected people to seek a way of life similar to that of their forefathers.

Speaking of the western democracies of the present time, Robinson said "They have lost foothold on the Biblical interpretation of history as dominated by moral factors."

He asserted that if the world were to live by the Bible it would mean a family of nations "each concerned with the needs of the other and the world's needs, rather than destruction."

"The Bible contains the only hope of peace which can endure," he concluded.

In another address at the morning convention session, Mrs. Thomas Nelson Coppedge, a noted lecturer, declared that "while man has progressed scientifically to the point of almost uncovering the secret of the physical universe, our moral progress has lagged behind."

Roy C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First Christian Church in Amarillo, Tex., was unanimously elected president of the international convention yesterday during the fourth day's business session. Five other officers and five executive committee members also were elected.

Delegates passed a resolution asking the immediate termination of Myron C. Taylor's assignment to the Vatican and urged strict enforcement of the constitution provision for separation of church and state. The resolution further requested that federal education aid be limited to public schools.

In another resolution the convention advocated expanded education on alcoholism and urged its members "to cooperate with responsible state and national temperance agencies to secure enactment of such laws as are necessary to curb the avarice of the liquor industry."

Convention executive secretary Gaines M. Cook of Indianapolis, in a late session speech yesterday, outlined the functions and purposes of the yearly convales.

Senator Bilbo Scoffs At Rumors Of Illness

POPLARVILLE, Miss., Aug. 2 (UP)—Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, D. Miss., turned up today with a slight case of hives and scoffed at persistent Washington reports that he was "gravely ill."

Bilbo visited friends away from home preventing immediate confirmation of his health. But last night he returned. A neighbor watched his automobile approach his "Dream Home" and reported that he was sitting in the back seat on a "raft of pillows."

Bilbo's secretary said that the Senator who was not seated by the 80th Congress last January is recovering from a series of operations on his jaw. As soon as his condition permits he plans to return to New Orleans for another operation.

Which Generation Is The "Lost Generation"?

In a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post there is an editorial by Arnold L. Horelick entitled "Our Lost Generation Wants to Belong." Mr. Horelick has a fair argument in his contention that the five million children who were between the ages of 10 and 13 when the Japs struck Pearl Harbor, compose today's "lost generation."

The claim of being the lost generation is also claimed by those participants in the first World War, and also the veterans of the second World War.

Mr. Horelick bases his claim on the fact that unless a boy of around 19 to 22 is a veteran, he does not have a chance to go to school, or get a job. He is met on every side by veteran preferences.

Veterans of both wars base their claim on the fact that their lives were disrupted at the very moment that foundations should be laid for a peaceful and secure life.

Each generation claiming this dubious distinction has a good argument for their claim. They are all right. It is just another one of the social and economic conditions caused by war.

Othman Is Grateful To All Who Allowed Him To Live - - He's Going On A Vacation

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (UPI)—The time has come again to say thanks to the kind people who have put up with my pieces for the paper during the last year, with an occasional threat of mayhem and to promise them one month, a blessed 30 days of rest.

My bride has bought one of those long skirts that makes her look peculiar. She also has a hat that resembles an oversized toothbrush. And I'm ready too. I've had my shoes resoled. We are about to board a flying machine for Guatemala.

There are still old people like Auntie, who is 9000 feet up in the mountains and said to be one of the most beautiful lakes in the world, and do nothing whatever we want. But with them, I am grateful to the lady in Waterville, Calif., who sent me two jars of loganberry jam to the president of the Studebaker Corp. who enjoyed a little spookery at his expense in print, and to a couple of dozen haberdashers from all over.

They took pity on my ragged hat and shipped C. O. D. enough cotton underwear to last me for the next 20 years.

The radio boys frequency modulation did not deserve a bow. They were a little better about my item concerning the necessity of climbing a tree just to tune the aerial when I wanted to play my few FM sets. They've been sending me letters regularly to my house to see what is wrong. Their verdict: Something peculiar about the air waves on Tuning Road.

The ball point fountain pen manufacturers who were perturbed about my habit of getting action from their products, are bringing out new models. I'll give them another chance.

Joseph B. Datsky, the Washington representative of the American Association of Mayonians, drew a check from Alaska, paid the check, and got a pot on the road. He came up smiling when I found him scraping the mayonians off his shoes.

He won't ever just hurt me, in case I don't point out that his the Senate cafeteria. A big goes noted had nothing to do with the government's Alaska railroad. The manager of the latter indicated in testimony before the House appropriations committee that he was in charge of perhaps the "worst" railroad in the world. I didn't even know that there were two railroads in Alaska, and I hereby tender my apologies to the White Pass and Yukon.

NOT SO GOOD! By MACKENZIE

Sailboating To Be New Sport On Big Kentucky Lake

MURRAY, Ky.—Now that the TVA has completed its $112,000,000 Kentucky Dam near here and Kentucky Lake is a reality, a new sport—SAILBOATING—is coming to this area.

Sailboats like the one pictured above now float securely on the Tennessee River lakes where formerly an erratic and variable stream was undependable for sailing. The lakes bring new sources of pleasure to thousands of people who use them for boating and new sources of economic return to others who provide the goods and services for recreation use.

Mrs. Lillian Blair and son of Akron, Ohio, have been visiting Mrs. Ruth Angelo and mother the past week. They left Sunday for a short visit with relatives in Louisville before returning to their home.

RESCUER—Franklin Barrett (above), 77, and Porter F. Chapp, 78, scored for age over youth when they routed a group of boys who had followed 13-year-old Margaret Todd to her doorstep and tried to force their way into her home in Philadelphia. Barrett almost kayaked one of the youngsters.

INDICTED AS RED—Harold Christoffel, CIO leader of the 1946 Allis-Chalmers strike, has been indicted by a Federal Grand Jury on charges of falsely denying to Congress that he was a Communist. He faces a maximum of 60 years in prison.

Fred Oranger, who retires from the government today after an epoch of well-loved press agency in behalf of his beloved fan in the federal aquarium.

And I wish I had space to mention a few more suffering citizens, who managed to laugh at their own fables in print. As for the ones who threatened to chase me with meat-axes, they can pump in 7.50. Attila, I won't even turn around to watch 'em splash.

Adios, Senores, and hasta la vista until I get back with a Spanish accent and a submachine gun on Sept. 1.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

It Does Make a Difference Whose Ox Is Being Gored

When it comes to being so ethical about a veteran pleading for your vote all else being equal, on the grounds he saw service overseas in the most bloody conflict in history, seems it does make a difference whose ox is being gored.

Charlie L. Lassiter is not the only candidate who is using his service record in his plea for votes. Not a single candidate in any campaign in the state has refrained from stating that he is a veteran of War I or II.

I can remember 60 years ago when in the South a candidate would state he fought for the Southern Confederacy, and in the North he would say to the voters that he was a Union soldier even if he was only a scullion home guard.

Now if so soon we are to rebuke the boys just coming home for boasting that he saw service overseas, it is a discouragement to him. I remember two short years ago a candidate pleaded for your support on the grounds that he had sent his paper to the men in service. Well, it is evident that he was well paid for it by the families of the veterans and veterans themselves, many of which got very few papers; also that local advertisers rallied to his support with paid advertising which built up a fine business for the editor, which otherwise would have been impossible. Of course he could say "Dear Buddies."

Now to the Veterans I wish to say that the country will soon belong to you, with all its political parties, and it will be you that must support the child. Don't let any rivalry between newspapers divide you, especially while one is a veteran in fact while the other only practiced from remote control for the financial advantages there was in it.

Let no voter conclude that he will not vote because of a heated campaign, as that does not lessen your responsibility to vote.

Charlie L. Lassiter is in a better position to cooperate with all citizens for the public good in the coming Legislature.

T. O. Turner.

Luxury Nurse

by CAROL MORRIS

Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Leitha Mallory, young nurse, is thrilled when she is offered a case at Tannahill, fabulous estate in Georgia. The patient is to be wealthy old Mason Tannahill, owner of the estate. But on the same day that Leitha receives the offer, Capt. Richard Haler of the Army arrives from Texas to ask her to marry him. He takes it for granted that she will accept him, but she resents his attitude and turns him down. At Tannahill, she finds that the family consists of the master's good-looking young nephew, Andres Tannahill, and two distant cousins, Tanis Geller and Charlene Upland. On the morning after Leitha's arrival, she goes horseback riding with Andres. She is puzzled and irritated by his curiosity about her family when he learns that she is a Northerner, her mother came from the South.

"Everything that happens to Tanis is exciting, although she likes to think that she is dying from boredom now. But tell me," he switched the subject back where it had been, "how did you happen to come south? And how if you don't mind my asking, did you happen to come to Tannahill?"

LEITHA turned from her contemplation of the blue lake and sky to look directly into his such frankness as to discourage his persistence. "I came south after my father's death a year ago," she said quietly. "He did not give any reason. There had been no special one except to leave all surrounding that held hauntingly painful memories, to seek new scenes, new faces. And perhaps she had, without realizing it, wished to visit the land of her mother's birth. She did not know the place, but the state had been Georgia," she said.

"I came to Tannahill," she said.

Had she turned, she could have seen the admiration in Andres' eyes as he watched her.

"It is said," Andres said, "that swayed the other question, 'because you do not remember her. She must have been very lovely to have had such a beautiful daughter.' 'I am supposed to look like her.' Leitha answered rather shortly, then changed the subject. 'Your cousin—is it Miss or Mrs. Geller—is a very beautiful woman.' 'All the Tannahill women are beautiful,' Andres replied. 'All of them with a few exceptions are very fair. The exceptions have a touch of red in their hair. Tanis is, or was, a countess. She dropped the title and the von' that went young to be a nurse at all—as well, as so lovely," he said.

There was real admiration in his dark eyes. Leitha could no longer feel offended.

"Don't you think we had better be starting back?" she got up with a quick movement and walked to the edge of the bluff.

She wore the only costume she had for riding: a pair of slacks and a yellow sweater. She was unaware how lovely she looked, standing there on the bluff, her slender figure outlined in the light, her hair such a glory. Had she turned, she could have seen the increased admiration in Andres' eyes as he watched her.

HE got up slowly, almost reluctantly. And turning toward him now, Leitha saw that it was with some difficulty. As if one leg refused to do his bidding, a leg that showed signs of a slight limp.

He said in explanation, "It only acts up when I forget about it. It's my souvenir from the Nazis." "I didn't know," Leitha said, speaking much more warmly.

"It's nothing, I was in the Air Force—shot down a few of those Jerries, thank heaven, before they got me. And proved to my Uncle Mason that I could be worth something. We had quarreled, you see, because he thought I didn't want to work."

"But it was his fault, the family's, that I'd been raised to do nothing worth while. Uncle Mason has a habit of quarreling with his relatives and casting them out. His smile was cryptic, yet without bitterness. 'All is forgiven—at least, so I trust—now that I've won a medal or two. But the leg won't let me tackle just anything, which is why I am here at Tannahill.' 'That's a tough break,' Leitha said.

She thought that Mason Tannahill ought to be proud of his nephew, rather than so short and fierce with him.

"Not so tough as many others got," Andres reminded. "I'm not complaining. Especially now," he added, a note of laughter in his eyes. "With such a lovely young companion at Tannahill, I think it has been companionable. This morning ride, I trust it has seemed so to you, Miss Mallory—or may I call you Leitha? An odd name."

LEITHA felt slow color rising in her cheeks. She said, "I think it better if you stick to 'Miss Mallory.' It works out better that way when I'm on a case. The ride has been pleasant," she added, so as not to seem too unfriendly. And for that same reason, she added further, "Leitha is a family name. But most people—my friends—call me Lee."

He said, stepping close to her. "It's a lovely name. Oddly enough, it was also a name in our family. There was a Leitha Tannahill. She could have been your great-grandmother I believe."

"Hardly," Leitha interrupted, laughing at the idea.

"I meant by years and generation," his smile was charming. "I hope that one day you may allow me the privilege of calling you 'Lee.'"

He gave her his little courtly bow before he went over to get the horses.

Leitha smiled. This Continental stuff! How Rich would laugh at it! But she supposed it was the way Andres had been brought up. Probably, much of his time had been spent abroad, or with private tutors and in exclusive schools.

And, as he had said, why should he work? He had probably been led to think there would never be any need for that.
